WASHINGTON.

The Investigation.

WASHINGTON, June 26. Mrs. Jenks was before the Potter committee again to-day and said she may have letters from Senator Kellogg to be submitted, but declines to produce them without the consent of that gentleman, which that gentleman gave through Judge Shellabarger. The senator added that he was desirous of having any and all correspondence between himself and Mrs. Jenks come before the committee. Mrs. Jenks then said the letters were in New Orleans, and she would produce them as soon as possible; expected a package of Anderson letters, have not yet been received. In reply to questions, witness said she dictated the Sherman letter to another party and wished the committee to distinctly understand that she herself did not write it.

Q. Who was the person to [illegible] dictated the letter?

Ans. [illegible] I decline to tell that; it would not be [illegible] is was a person [illegible] local politics; I saw him produce it [illegible] be dead now for what I know; he was a kind of a republican. The first draft of the letter was too elaborate for witness, but the [illegible] draft suited better. Witness did not show either draft to Weber; left him to infer that the letter was genuine. Never mentioned the fact of a first draft to any one until in this room. Witness asked McMahon with an air of haughtiness if there were any more [illegible] blind or half as witnesses in [illegible] had better go out up in the highway and bring them in.

McMahon You know, Mrs. Jenks, there are none so blind as those that will not see.

Mrs. Jenks was then informed two letters awaited her in the [illegible] post office and she was released to read them.

A.G. Haley, was recalled and testified that he had several conversations in January and February last with Mrs. Jenks regarding the Sherman letter and it came out in conversation that she was in Washington on behalf of Governor Packard for collector; that she had approached Secretary Sherman about the matter; that she knew the whereabouts of the Sherman letter, and had been offered two thousand dollars for it. Witness advised her that the letter [illegible] worth five thousand to Sherman, and he (witness) proposed that she advise her agent to place the letter where it would do the most good. Mrs. Jenks gave witness to understand that she would visit Louisiana and bring the letter with her on her return. She had read a letter to witness during their conversation purporting to be from her husband which referred to the Sherman letter. The letter was very affectionate and contained much poetry, and he being very fond of poetry its reading was greatly enjoyed by him.

Being cross-examined by Cox, witness said his acquaintance with Mrs. Jenks amounted to a great deal more than mere boarding-house acquaintance. As near as he could remember the quotation, referring to the Sherman letter, purporting to Be from her husband, the words were about as follows: "You have committed the blunder of permitting those documents to leave your hands."

Owing to the deafness of witness, Cox asked if he did not experience great difficulty in hearing Mrs. Jenks in conversation, and he replied, "Oh, no; none. In fact she has a very fine voice, and I can always understand a lady better than gentlemen." [Laughter.]

Q. Did Mrs. Jenks ever say she had actual possession of the Sherman letter?

Ans Yes, sir; she undoubtedly did that it was in some safe in New Orleans, subject to her command for future production.

After a short executive session the committee took a recess.

During the cross-examination of Haley, Mrs. Jenks occupied a chair in a corner of the room in the rear of witness and was seemingly much amused.

GENERAL NEWS.

Ohio Democrats.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, June 26. The democratic state committee met in the opera house this morning and was called to order by John G. Thompson. A F Willing was chosen temporary chairman and Frank Kelly, of Cleveland, secretary. After appointing committees the convention took a recess.

The convention reassembled at 2 p. m. Durbin Ward was chosen permanent chairman. The following ticket was nominated: for secretary of state, David R. Paige; supreme judge, A. T. Hume; member of the board of public works, Rushfield. The following platform was adopted:

The democratic party of Ohio hereby reaffirms the following clauses in the platform of the convention of July 25, 1877, endorsed by a majority of more than 22,000 last fall by the people of Ohio, we renew our pledges of devotion to the union and constitution. With regard to amendments it declares as essential to the preservation of free government a faithful adherence to the following principles: Strict constructions, home rule, supremacy of civil over military power, separation of church and state, equality of all citizens before the law, liberty of individual action annexed by sumptuary laws, absolute acquiescence in lawfully expressed will of the majority, opposition to all subsidies, preservation of public lands for the use of actual settlers, and the maintenance and perfecting of our common school system as pertinent to the issues now pending before the people.

Resolved, That the investigation of frauds committed at the last presidential election in Florida and Louisiana ought to have been made by the electoral commission. Its refusal to do so was in violation of the spirit of law and order. It was an organized and gross outrage on the people of the United States, and whilst the decision as made by the 44th congress of the question as to who should be declared president of the United States for the present term was in our judgment final, that decision ought not to preclude authentic investigation and exposure of all frauds committed in that election, and the due accountability of all who were guilty or connected with them.

Resolved, That the commercial and industrial stagnation that has so long prevailed throughout the country and the consequent wide-spread suffering, is due directly to the pernicious financial legislation of the republican party, which we hereby arraign for its acts and charge,

First That at a time when the country was weighed down with a debt created on a basis of a full volume of paper added to both the precious metals as money, it enacted a sweeping change in the measure of volume wholly in the interest of moneyed capital by demonetizing silver and decreeing the destruction of legal tender paper and thereby wrongfully added in effect hundreds of millions to the burden of debt and tax upon the people.

Second By pursuing the [illegible] policy of contracting the paper currency, and hoarding gold, it has increased continuously the value of money and securities that partake the enhancement of money, and decreased the value of all other property and especially of capital designed for productive use and required for the employment of labor, thus repressing instead of fostering industry, compelling idleness instead of [illegible] this party in Ohio puts forth [illegible] the declaration [illegible] settled [illegible] while we congratulate the country [illegible] downward [illegible] involved in the republican policy has been partially avoided by the [illegible] at the last session of congress, restoring the debt-paying power to the silver dollar, made law in spite of a presidential veto, and stopping the further destruction of greenbacks, we demand as further acts of justice, as well as measures of relief, the absolute repeal of the [illegible] act, and the lawful liberation of the coin hoarded in the treasury; the removal of all restrictions to the coinage of silver, and the re-establishment of silver as a money metal the same as gold, the same as it was before its fraudulent demonetization; the gradual substitution of United States [illegible] for national bank notes, and its permanent establishment as the sole paper money of the country, [illegible] receivable for all dues to the government and of equal trader with coin, the [illegible] of such [illegible] to be regulated by legislation or organic law so as to give the people the [illegible] of stability in volume of currency and consequent stability of value; no further increase in the bonded debt and no further sale of bonds for the purchase of coin for resumption purposes, but the gradual extinction of the public debt; rigid economy in the reduction of expenditures in all public service, and tariff for revenue only.

Resolved, That the interests of the industrial wealth-producing classes, in the permanent interest of the people of the United States, [illegible] labor and [illegible] should be secured in its enjoyment; our warmest sympathy is extended to the laboring classes who have been thrown out of employment by the ruinous financial policy and unjust legislation of the republican party, and we pledge the democratic party to the reversal of that policy and a restoration of all the rights they are entitled to upon its ascendancy to power.

Resolved, That there can be no legitimate employment of organized force in this country except to execute the law and to maintain public peace; that no violence should be countenanced to obtain redress for any alleged grievance, but should be repressed at every cost until relief can be secured by legal methods. We congratulate the country on the adoption of the constitutional and pacific policy of the local governments in the states of the south so long advocated by the democratic party and which has brought peace and harmony to that section of the United States.

[illegible] Republicans.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 26. The republican state convention was called to order at noon by Hon. A. C. Babcock, chairman state central committee. Wm. A. James, of Lake county was chosen chairman, and upon taking the chair recalled the services and triumphs of the republican party in every stage of the national crisis and urged that there be no weak or uncertain timber in the platform which was to be constructed by this convention. After the appointment of the usual committees the convention took a recess till 2 o'clock

Upon reassembling, none of the committees being ready to report, a speech was made by General Hurlbutt. The committee on credentials then reported all counties represented. The committee on permanent organization reported for president Chas. E. Lippincott, with the usual number of vice presidents.

Nominations being in order, the following were made: For treasurer, Gen J. L. Smith; for superintendent of public instruction, Slade. The committee on platform then made the following report: The delegated republican party of the state of Illinois in convention assembled, do hereby declare,

First An unfaltering faith in the principles and patriotism of the republican party, both state and national, and its permanent fitness and ability over all other parties to administer the government of both state and nation wisely and successfully.

Second That the democratic party being largely composed of recent rebels and their sympathizers cannot be safely entrusted with the administration of the affairs of the government. That the political success of that party in Congress as well as in several of the states only shows its grossly partisan character and general incapacity and lack of honor and patriotism.

Third For the financial sympathy created by the republican party during the war and, in spite of the violent opposition of the democratic party we express our unqualified admiration by its provisions. People have been supplied with a larger amount of paper currency, safer and more uniform in value than they have ever before enjoyed. The credit of the nation has steadily improved, while the principal interest of the public debt as well as the burdens of national taxation have been steadily diminished. Such results can only be produced by honesty, economy, and wisdom in the management of financial affairs.

Fourth We are also opposed to any further contraction of greenback currency and are in favor of such currency as can be maintained at par with and convertible into coin at the will of the holder. We are in favor of currency being received for import duties, and we deprecate the defeat of the recent bill for that purpose by the democratic house of representatives.

Fifth Permanent pacification of the Southern section of the Union and the complete protection of all its citizens in all their civil, political, personal and property rights, is a duty to which the party stands sacredly pledged. In order to redeem this pledge it has placed recent amendments in the constitution of the United States and upon the righteous basis of said amendments it will go forward in the work of pacification until peace shall come through right-doing, and contentment through justice.

Sixth That the criminal code should be amended for the protection of depositors in savings banks, by providing for the punishment of dishonest bank managers.

And finally be it resolved that we believe that those who preserved the country should govern it instead of those who attempted to destroy it.

The platform was adopted unanimously and the convention adjourned, sine die.

GALVESTON, Texas, June 26. A News special from Mason, Texas, says that reports from Kimball county, show that the Indian depredation, have been committed in the vicinity of Johnson's Fork and Junction City last Sunday night. They captured over 100 horses from these places. Indians were seen in large bodies. Their trail shows they are going in the direction of Nueces, by way of Cedar creek. Thirty-five men are in pursuit, and when last heard from but two miles behind the Indians.

DEADWOOD, June 26. Last Sunday Indians made their first demonstrations of hostility this season in this section, by firing on two citizens of Deadwood, who were on a hunting trip near the Redwater, 30 miles from here. The men had killed an antelope and were fastening it on ponies, and two shots were fired and struck, in close proximity to them. They quickly dropped the antelope and made their escape followed by several more shots from the hostiles, five of whom were in view yesterday. Three men made their appearance in Galena City, Bear Buttes, and reported that a band of about 15 Indians had run them in, Gen. Bradley and his command are in the vicinity of Redwater and will doubtless come in contact with these roaming bands.

SAN ANTONIO, June 26. A News special says that the following is as much of Gen. McKenzie's report as can be obtained for publication. The expedition was in two columns, one under Lt. Col. Shafter, 24th infantry, the other under Capt. Youngs of the cavalry. Gen. McKenzie moved on with the command of Capt. Young. The column, under Capt. Young, left camp at Devil's river June 11, and crossed June 12, fifteen miles above the mouth, camping that night ten miles southwest of the river, at a dry camp; during the 13th and 14th he marched some forty miles to Bear mountain, and on the 15th he intended to march twenty-five miles but the guide after conducting the column twelve miles fell sick, and as water could not be reached there was danger of all the stock perishing; word was sent to Col. Shafter not to cross, and if he had crossed to recross. It was then determined on account of frequent cattle raids to search the country in the San Diego and San Rodigo districts. Shafter was accordingly notified, the commands joined in the San Diego on the 17th and moved to Rhaolino on the headwaters of the San Rodigo, where Mexican troops were met under Col. Valdez, who stated that he was ordered to repel the Americans on Mexican territory. He was informed that the [illegible] had no hostility towards Mexico, but was after thieves and Indians. Col. Nuncio, who had arrived with additional troops, stated in general terms that he was obliged to obey his orders and attack the United States troops. After some correspondence had passed the Mexican force crossed the return route of our troops a second time and asked for an apology for the presence of troops, and the entire command recrossed the river without collision, trouble or annoyance. The expedition failed mainly on account of the scarcity of water and the sickness and failure of guides. The Mexican force was weak and refused to render any assistance in arresting thieves or Indians.

A political correspondent says that notwithstanding grave representations, especially on the part of Prince Bismarck, Turkish delegates in the congress continue stubborn and their obstinacy is calculated to lessen the probability of peace.

It may be wise and subserve some public good beyond our comprehension, for those having a hand in the conduct of public journals claiming to be supporters of the republican administration, to continue to publish, day after day, side thrusts, flings, taunts and sneers against the president and members of his cabinet. One of our Denver contemporaries, from personal pique or prejudice or constitutional tendency for defamation, has made the secretary of state the target for his shafts of abuse and detraction. We opine that Mr. Evarts will survive these malicious attacks, so out of taste, and contemptible. A man of shining abilities and learning, of elevated character and aims; who has rendered the country faithful and successful service in an important mission abroad; who was devoting his efforts and commanding abilities to laying the foundations and establishing the principles of the republican party when those who would now traduce and belittle him, were "mewing and puking in their mother's arms." Mr. Evarts' name and fame will be recognized and honored among men long after the puny attacks of his assailants, with their authors, shall have been forgotten.

The 45th Congress adjourned last week, having at last through the agency of committees of conference, agreed upon, and passed all the general appropriation bills, and having during the session enacted much useful and needed legislation which we have no time or space to review. It is a noticeable fact, in these times of unusual demoralization in public bodies and institutions, that nothing has transpired in the legislative department at the capital, to shock the moral sensibilities of the public, stain the honest fame of members, or impair confidence in their purity and fidelity. So far as has been made known the representatives of the people, one and all, return home with clean palms.

It is a matter for congratulation that toward the close of the session a better understanding and feeling prevailed between members and the executive head of the government. The people have all the time understood the embarrassements and difficulties that surrounded the president, the pledges and the purposes of concession and conciliation upon which he was and alone could have been elected, and have maintained their faith in his honesty and wisdom. The representatives gradually learned and considered this, and shaped their judgment and action accordingly. Hence much of the acrimony and distrustful and denunciatory spirit that manifested itself earlier in the session has disappeared, and it is to be hoped that party elements will be less turbulent, and that our chief magistrate has before him a comparatively calm, untroubled sea.

THE SUNDAY GAZETTE.

To the Editor of the Gazette:—

If the first impression is favorable, the door to public favor is "ajar." A sensitive prescience seems to whisper, "He has on the wedding garment," and the door opens noiselessly and wide. The inviting ground of public opinion welcomes and waits the occupation. The Sunday GAZETTE has followed up that first most favorable impression, by making each succeeding issue that drops in upon us noiselessly every Sunday morning, a little better, or it seems so. We begin to expect it; we look out at the window and wonder perhaps what is detaining our usually prompt carrier boy this morning, and our restlessness increases at the delay until we are likely to charge neglect or indifference upon the innocent.

The Sunday paper, in the country, has more foes to face than the prejudice of rivals. The most discriminating editorial ability and wisest prudence that caters to the taste of the Sunday reader, finds a certain amount of drift wood in the channels of prejudice that has to be poked into the current, one piece at a time. There is a great deal of "paleocrystic ice" in the universe of superstition that must melt away as do its Arctic monuments in the southern drift, gradually, but certainly and inevitably, under the process of invariable law. You cannot break them to pieces, their foundations are too deeply submerged; but they will melt and mingle at last in the common flood. At first, an innovation upon established prejudices—a trespasser upon a sacred domain, that would till and irrigate a soil long since pre-empted and devoted to revered custom, and would establish its worldly idols in their stead—it has become a necessity, an ally in the inviting field of moral, social and religious progress. Time was when Sundays dragged. The morning prayer was long and tedious to the juvenile prisoner who inhaled the fragrance of the "budding morn" and heard the birds sing in the lattice without—who fell asleep in his chair, dreaming that he was a bird, and was pinched by his big brother when his father came to the "Jews," thanking the [illegible] station. Then the boy was scrubbed, dressed, and catechised, examined in his Sunday school lesson, his cerebral obliquity snapped into activity, and then was led off to the meeting house with a copy of "Baxter's Call," or "Saints' Rest" in his hand to be exchanged for one of equal interest that our good parents never failed to provide to furnish forth the Sunday school library. In the afternoon, we were snapped down into a corner to listen to the reading of the bible or the religious journal.

But when our imprisoned souls could feel that the evening shades drew nigh, and we could see the glancing shafts of the slowly setting sun, as he sunk behind the hills; then we stood by the back fence, our batteries prepared, and every deck cleared for action, and with the last tip of his burnished forehead from the hill top, the heavy broadsides were opened along the whole line, and continued upon every ungodly squirrel and chipmuck until darkness put an end to the conflict.

"The child is father to the man." The father of to-day is the child, whose soul and life was encased in the mould of these puritanic prejudices. He has had to outgrow them. He has been educated out of the shell of superstition in which he has been shut as in a vise. The child of to-day breathes the unimprisoned air. He is father to the coming man. Let us welcome then the Sunday GAZETTE as an assistant educator of this promising child, and trust the tree will not be warped or twisted by any improper inclination given to the twig.

J. W.

CONDITION OF THE COLORED PEOPLE IN THE SOUTH.

Probably no people ever had a more difficult question to solve than we had at the end of the war in reference to the colored people. We had performed an act of justice in giving them freedom, but it was questioned whether that act of justice after all was an act of mercy. After the close of the war congress spent considerable time in devising plans which should make real the freedom given to the colored man and enable him to maintain his rights without special legislation or protection.

How far this legislation of congress has been successful is well told by Col. T. W. Higginson in the Atlantic for July. It will be remembered that Col. Higginson commanded a colored regiment during the war and has been an eloquent champion of the colored race. The article referred to gives the results of his observations in the south in regard to the colored people. The following quotation from the article shows what a change has taken place in their manner of living:

Formerly the colored people of the sea islands, even in their first days of freedom, slept very generally on the floor, and when our regimental hospital was first fitted up, the surgeon found with dismay that the patients had regarded the beds as merely beautiful ornaments, and had unanimously laid themselves down in the intervening spaces. Now I noticed bedstead and bedding in every cabin I visited in South Carolina and Florida. Formerly the cabins often had no tables, and families rarely ate together, each taking food as was convenient; but now they seemed to have family meals, a step toward decent living. This progress they themselves recognized. Moreover, I often saw pictures from the illustrated papers on the wall, and the children's school-books on the shelf. I rarely met an ex-soldier who did not own his house and ground, the inclosures varying from five to two hundred acres; and I found one man on the St. John's who had been offered $3,000 for his real estate. In many cases these homesteads had been bought within a few years, showing a steady progress in self-elevation.

He also states that he met about 100 colored men who had served under him during the war, and that only one (who was addicted to the use of whisky, of this entire number complained of poverty.

In regard to race hostility Mr. Higginson saw no evidence of it in the three states, Virginia, South Carolina and Florida, he visited. He claims that the colored race there has as many privileges and rights as in the New England states. To show this he mentions the following instances:—

The legislature of Connecticut refused to incorporate a colored military company, but Governor Hampton reviewed in Charleston a colored regiment a few days before Mr. Higginson's visit with the same attention with which he would have reviewed a white body of troops. While in Virginia a bill was reported favorably for the creation of a colored military company. He saw colored policemen in the democratic city of Charleston, a thing which he never saw in northern cities. He rode with the colored people in first-class cars throughout Virginia and South Carolina, and in the street cars of Virginia. The Charleston News and Courier heartily endorsed the following remark of the Baltimore Gazette in regard to the admission of colored lawyers to practice in the court of appeals in Maryland: "Raise the educational test, the rigidity of examination for admission, or the moral test as high as you please, but let us have done with the color test."

While Mr. Higginson recognizes the fact that much remains to be accomplished, yet he thinks it is foolish not to recognize the good progress already made. Surely such testimony from such a friend of the colored race is encouraging.

The Pueblo Chieftain has found a new way to [illegible] ranch, i. e. [illegible].

Make your arrangements for the fourth of July excursion to Alamosa. Ample accommodations have been provided for all who go. This will be the excursion of the season.

Five car loads of Schuttler wagons for the [illegible] transportation company were received at the freight depot in this city yesterday. They will be used in hauling ore and freight on their line between here and Leadville.

Pueblo contractors don't like the way they are being used by the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad company. The contracts for the building and painting of the new depot at that place were completed in March last, but their bills have not yet been paid.

The case of Mattison, charged with stealing a coat and pocket book from W. H. Lowther, was called before Judge Smith yesterday morning, but the prosecuting witness failing to appear, the prisoner was discharged. Judgment was rendered against the plaintiff to recover the costs of the case.

Fatal Accident.

T. I. Ayles, fireman on engine No. 101, of the D. & R. G. railway, was killed yesterday afternoon at Washington Springs. At the time of the accident he was swinging out of the cab door, looking at [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] and instantly killed. His body will be taken to [illegible] to-day.

[illegible]

The train from the south which reached here at 4:10 p. m. yesterday, was unable to proceed further on account of the damage which the track had sustained from the storm. The bridge near Castle Rock was severely damaged, [illegible] bents being washed out. There also occurred three washouts between the Divide and Castle Rock, which prevented the transferring of passengers. The train will remain here until 7:30 this morning when it will proceed north and there is no doubt but that the trains will run on time by noon to day.

A [illegible] Bill of Fare at Unity Hall this Evening.

COURSE 1st. A lecture by Rev. C. C. Salter on Jerusalem and the Holy Land, illustrated by large colored wall pictures brought from Europe. [illegible] have heard Mr. Salter [illegible] to hear him again. The [illegible] will begin at 7:45 sharp. The [illegible] will be the best ones to see [illegible] Come early.

COURSE 2d. An exhibition of the beautiful [illegible] Jewish Tabernacle, the moveable [illegible] of the wilderness.

COURSE 3d. Ice cream and [illegible], furnished by the ladies of the Congregational church, who know how to do it. This last part will begin at nine o'clock. Business men and others who cannot attend the lecture are invited to come at nine and get some ice cream.

The Fourth.

It has been in contemplation for several weeks among the officers and friends of Colorado College to have some exercises in the interest of the college on the coming Fourth of July; and accordingly, at the suggestion of President Tenney, there will be a gathering of as many of the citizens [illegible] as can find it convenient to attend, on the grounds near the new building at 9 o'clock sharp, for such brief exercises [illegible] be thought advisable, to be more particularly announced hereafter.

In the evening of the same day the ladies of this city, under the general direction of the Ladies' College Aid Society, will furnish refreshments, such as ice cream, strawberries, &c., at Unity Hall, where music and short speeches appropriate to the occasion may also be expected by several gentlemen from abroad. For the purpose of making arrangements for the occasion all ladies having the college interests at heart and are willing to lend a helping hand, are requested to meet at the east college room Friday at 4 o'clock, p. m.

Let there be a hearty reponse to this request.

The avails of the entertainment will be applied towards helping forward the college building.

The Garland Independent has pulled stakes and gone to Alamosa.

Lecture.

A rare treat coming. "The Arkansas Traveler abroad or life in the south in peace and in war." Rev. W. H. Gillain of the M. E. church, who spent twenty-five years as a traveling preacher in Arkansas and Texas, before, during and since the war, has embodied his experience and observation in a lecture which is full of information and incident and which, being prepared and delivered by a man who has personal knowledge of his subject and ability to tell it, never fails to interest.

The lecture will be delivered at the M. E. church in Colorado Springs, Friday evening, June 28th 1878, beginning at 8 o'clock sharp.

Admittance, adults 25 cents; Children 15 cents. For the benefit of the M. E. church.

Let there be a full house and a fine lecture will repay the hearers.

Military Notes.

At the meeting of the Colorado Rifles, Tuesday night J. F. Pierce was elected secretary pro tem.

After reading the minutes Thayles [illegible], J. H. Sullivan, C. A. Jenkins and S. C. Robinson were elected members of the company.

A descriptive roll of the members was taken, and the executive committee made its report, which was adopted.

The non commissioned officers of the company are as follows:

W. J. [illegible], first sergeant; W. [illegible], second sergeant; [illegible] Lindsley, third sergeant; Paul Curtis, fourth sergeant; Fred Brown, first corporal; Frank Howbert, second corporal.

The undress uniform of the company is to be a cap, loose blouse, and pants, all of blue.

W. J. Snow's resignation as treasurer was accepted.

The company had its first drill, which lasted about an hour.

Unity hall has been selected as the place of meeting for the present.

The Play.

Last night this charming comedy was given to a large house, as well as it possibly could have been done, and although we know this is saying a great deal still we mean every word of it. The dialogue was excellent, stage positions gracefully gone through with and the costumes and make-up superb. Wallace excelled himself, and as a comedian he has few equals. Brasford showed himself the first-class [illegible] that he is. Lindsay was perfectly at home in his part, and Philleo made a capital swell. Of Miss Baker's acting we cannot do her justice in the small space of a newspaper report. With a sweet face she combines the gentleness of a true lady the sparkle of a charming actress and a bright appreciation of the character she assumes. Miss Fannie Alton was immense in her impersonation of a humorous part. In fact the entire company are comme il faut and are growing in the public favor. To-night will be given the Lancashire Lass, a first-class melo-drama founded on fact, and said to be one of the finest plays of the kind ever put upon the stage. We advise our citizens, now they have the opportunity, to hear the Wallace comedy company as often as possible, because such a chance may not occur again for a very long time.

Following Up the Track-Layers.

I sing the glories of the nineteenth century's great apostle, great crusader. That I had wortheir pen and voice! All honor to those who fight under his banner. Keen be the lance which wars against giant mountains, which conquers space. Here comes the construction train, Mike Green with his well disciplined, orderly force of 65 men. How perfectly master and man understand each other. The Mexican and the Irishman have met. The rich Irish brogue mingles with the smooth musical Spanish. The Irishman handles shovel and crowbar and lays the rails. The Mexican spikes them down. Well may he with good heart spike down firm and fast these rails which are to speed to him all he needs from other lands, and to place within reach of the world the riches so long walled in which his country has to offer. Welcome, dusky brother, to civilization; give us of your gold and silver, your precious woods, your rich farming lands, your grapes and wine and luscious fruits; let us breathe your health-giving air.

An Irishman building a railroad is a creature to be admired, such good work can he do. Much more is he to be admired when thus employed than when armed with bottle and shilallah. It is a case of construction or destruction.

Beside the track are piles of ties with blue cabalistic marks upon them, explained to me this way, "Those with a cross upon them are only for temporary use, or for places where there is but little strain. Those with dots are for heavy work." A Mexican is walking up and down the line with drinking water, for this is hot, dusty, thirsty work. A hand car drawn by a white horse keeps coming up with rails from the construction train, laying them as it goes. A man carrying a keg of spikes moves down the track laying four spikes upon each tie. Mike Green calls out "another tie here, a good strong, heavy one; rails now spike her down!" All honor to old Ireland and to her sons for the good work they have done in sending those arteries filled with lifeblood through the land! Let him who rides by rail pin a shamrock in his bonnet. The crest for this road might be a shamrock, the Irishman's posy, upon a sun-rayed disk, the Mexican's birthright.

Engineer McMurtrie stands upon the track. This straight, level road is child's play to him. Just give him a twisting, curving waltz over the plains, a mountain, to other eyes unscalable, to climb, a grade of 211 feet to the mile, and you will soon see what metal he is made of. And Gov. Hunt is here also, resting on his oars after his long hard pull. Rest fast, good soldier, there is work ahead! [illegible] Mike Green with mighty sledge hammer blows cuts in two a rail which is too long. What a ringing sound goes forth upon the air! It is the ring of joy bells to this land, ringing out the old and in the new. The music of the anthem sounded by these hammers to-day will echo through all time.

At my feet is a large ant-hill, whose inhabitants are hurrying and scurrying about as if they thought the end of the world was at hand. There is a change coming, busy workers; not an end but a beginning. The age of industry, the age of which you are an emblem, is at hand. Out goes sloth and superstition.

Up to the spot where the depot is to stand the track is laid, when quitting time comes. To-night the first passenger train comes in. All the town is out to welcome it with bonfire and [illegible]. The [illegible] illuminated. [illegible] 23 miles away coming out of darkness, shining out like a star in the east. How slowly it seems to move. Will it never come? It cannot come soon enough for the impatient crowd who await it, who have hoped for it so long. At last it reaches the bridge it crosses the Rio Grande. The brave little pioneer narrow gauge, which has weathered the hard times and fought [illegible] way through thick and thin [illegible] its name. It is by right and might [illegible] and Rio Grande." It whistles clear and loud, a whistle which sounds from Sierra Blanca to Mount San Antonio. Hats come off, a shout goes up, but it is not a noisy crowd. What a noise it would take to make a noise in this wide plain. There is that which kindles to eloquence and that which fades to silence. Early in the evening it was raining and it is still cloudy. Just as the train crosses the bridge the wood [illegible] I turn from the track and following the course of the shining river go toward the camp, filled with thoughts of this dawning, and find it hard to fall asleep in the face of this awakening.

In the morning I go down to see the road completed to the point where it turns southward toward Mexico. While waiting for the coming of the construction train, I stop to talk with "Song Choe," a gentle-mannered, pleasant-faced Chinese woman. She gives me a cup of tea and invites me to breakfast with her in a tone which says, "do accept;" so I sit down, eating rice and ham and eggs out of a bowl with chop sticks and drinking tea without milk or sugar, after Chinese fashion; and the breakfast is very good, although I know that that which gives this simple fare its flavor is the kindly manner of the heathen woman a manner worthy of imitation by Christians. She shows me her jewelry some rings and some silver buttons, and a beautiful opium pipe, belonging to Sing Loo, whom I suppose to be her husband. Sing says to me, pointing to Song, "She likee you welly much;" to which Song assents with kindly nod. I rise to go, and they invite me to supper. "You comee supper, me cookee wellee good supper chicken."

Just beyond Song Choe lives Mrs. Karns, whom many Colorado Springs people will remember as former proprietress of the Manitou House and the Colorado Springs Hotel. She is now a resident of Alamosa, and those who have known her before and who propose visiting the new town will be glad to learn that she has opened a house there. She, too, invites me to breakfast, giving me a nice cup of coffee and a delicious breaded chop. Are you alarmed by my appetite? Why, I slept in a tent last night. This is Colorado, where people have both appetites and digestion, and plenty of good food to satisfy both. Mrs. Karns is what may well be called a successful woman, notwithstanding that she has had many a hard pull, giving her a tired look about the eyes. She has raised two sons who do her honor. From Mrs. Karns I go into Schiffer's, a large clothing and dry goods establishment, and watch some Mexicans trading. They have brought in their wool and are exchanging it in part for household supplies. Two young Mexicans ride up, drop from their horses and come in. One buys a light sombrero, out they go, vault into their saddles, become part of their horses, and ride away not with a borrowed but a born and inherited grace. Then I go into a book store and find a copy of Charles Kingsley's verses. A gentleman at Mr. Schiffer's lends me a field glass. With this and Charles Kingsley's verses, I go out onto the track to wait the coming of Mike Green and his men. They come and on goes the good work until [illegible] lifts his hand calling out dinner. During the noon rest, the clouds toward Del Norte fire off a salute, big guns, too, and not loaded with blank cartridges. The ground is soon covered with hard white balls. While this cannonading is going on I take refuge in a butcher's shop and learn that the price of beef and mutton here ranges from three to ten cents, and listen to stories of mining days in California told me by one out of his own experience. One story is very characteristic. A German miner suspecting that his sluices were being robbed, determines to watch. He steals down by moonlight, discovers that his suspicions are correct, finds and kills the thief, who proves to be a Chinaman. He wakes a friend and takes him with him to the house of the justice of the peace, whom they succeed in waking. "What's wrong?" says the disturbed justice. "I must see you at your office." "What is it? What is it?" "Why I have killed a Chinaman." "All right; go and kill another."

A stage comes in from the east and whirls up to the hotel door in good style. It is its last trip from this direction. It is vanquished by its swift, strong pursuer. Back come the men and bend to their work again. A few more rails laid, a few more spikes driven, and it is done. "There, the track is laid," says the man who has the honor to put the last rail in place. I drive in the last spike with my face turned southward, for the road will now run, wishing a blessing and good luck to all who have helped to pull the good work through, whether with hand or head or heart, and to those who have given gold may it return to them doubled o'er and o'er again from the rich hills and valleys which we face to-day.

Good Sunday work is this, the completion of the road thus far. No better sermon has been preached this day. It is prayer, praise and thanksgiving. From this day forth there will be regular service. My face is burned to a blister

But what care I how black I be,
I've [illegible] the road [illegible] Santa Fe.

CHEYENNE CANON ICE.

It is an undisputed fact, that impure ice is as unhealthful and dangerous to use as impure water. And believing that the wants of the community would justify me, and that an effort to supply a good and pure article would be appreciated, I built, at a great expense, a large reservoir, which I filled from the pure sparkling water of Cheyenne Canon, and from which I cut and stored a large quantity of ice of the most unquestionable purity.

T. E. JOHNSON.

We, the undersigned, residing in the neighborhood of Cheyenne Canon, fully endorse the above, and take pleasure in recommending the ice, knowing it is what it is claimed to be, Cheyenne Canon ice.
